Already the mother of a child with ADHD, bi-polar and seizure disorder, she refused to believe the doctors who said Chanel would never speak, write, or survive in a typical school environment. Worried about her daughters future and infuriated by a broken, bureaucratic special education system that endangered Channels well-being on several occasions, Valerie armed herself with knowledge and became an advocate force to be reckoned with in her local school district. And when tragedy struck, not once but twice, Valerie found herself in unfamiliar emotional territory, being guided and supported by her two special needs angels to follow her heart and find her own wings. In Advocating for Your Angel, Valerie beautifully weaves her own powerful story of parenting a special needs angel with the information, strategies, and tools she used as a non-attorney advocate to transform her district and help Chanel graduate from a typical high school with honors.
