CHAPTER XI Back to camp--At Cedar Mountain--Receive my discharge from the army--Remain in camp at request of General Jackson--Exhibit my marksmanship to General Lee at his request--I report to General J. E. B. Stuart--The Second Manassas battle. Early in August I got a hospital leave, and while yet on my crutches I went back to camp to resume my duties at headquarters. Many of those I had known in the valley campaign were asleep on the fields of glory around Richmond, and there were many vacancies in the ranks. But the morale of the army was unsurpassed. I took eleven sharpshooters and crossed the Rapidan River, about four miles above where the railroad crosses it between Gordonsville and Manassas, and circled in toward the rear of Pope's army, while it was encamped near Cedar Mountain. As I was looking over the valley...
